Introduction

Women's Agency Research Centre Nepal (WARN), is a leading rights based organization of Nepali women. The women who are involved in activities of women's rights and liberation movements for a long time came together and collectively started to work for this organization. Nepalese women are experiencing the patriarchal domination from long time monarchical ruling system. Even in the multiparty democracy system, women were not given equal power and position with regards to decision making level despite being stated in the constitution. Now Nepal is in a transitional state of republican system, but women still are facing lots of problems such as educational, political, economic and social discrimination.

There are several forums and sectors for the exercise of human rights, however; statistics show women have low involvement in every sector of decision-making. According to the Census of Nepal 52 percent of the total population are women. Still, women's participation in different sectors provisioned in the constitution is only 33 percent. Even though in most of the forums and sectors women's participation is negligible; it shows that there is visible discrimination in government appointments to take women in policy making positions. Gender equality is addressed in laws, but millions of women still have no access to justice. They are facing lots of mental and physical problems and procedural obstacles to access opportunities.

WARN was formed because women were virtually invisible as planners and managers of development programs. It enhances stakeholders to realize and internalize women's issues in practice. It focuses primarily on profound three key areas of economic, social, and political sectors of both government and non government organizations. It seeks to address the social, economic, and psychological problems resulting from Nepal's 10 years of civil war and four years of peace process, constitutional practice and political instability by empowering women in both their productive and reproductive capacity through research and action oriented activities

Philosophy

We strongly believe that WARN will be developed as a resource center for research in women's development in relation to gender equity and just society.

The concept of women's agency is useful for research on women's issues and gender issues by focusing on all kinds of gender gaps and discrimination on the basis of cast, class and religious belief at all levels and sectors. Mainly our agency reviews the advantages, disadvantages and limitations of policy implementation and its practices from grass root to national level as well as international level. The agency brings into dialogue the women and men who participate in gender and social issues related to women's violence, and exploitation. WARN strongly pressurizes the government to draw policy in to the implementation strategy through gender equality as a mandatory principle. Its mandate is to ensure the full implementation of different international agreements of women's human rights.

VISION

Access women's agency in grassroots, national and international levels.

MISSION

Irrationalize women's agency in all sectors both government and non government such as social, political, economical, educational, health, environment through exploring gender gaps in decision making level.

GOAL:

Establish gender equality culture and practice in every action

Objectives

1. To study women's issues defined as the capacity of women for rational decision-making and examines gender gaps at micro and macro level of every sectors and prepare reports, draw recommendations including enactment of legislation to provide equal-pay rights.
2. To promote women's self sufficiency in achieving their rights.
3. To develop and organize programs for women to concur or build up confidence, women's individual agency (autonomy) and collective agency (Groups, CBO's, NGO's, institutions, networks etc.) from grassroots, national and international level.
4. To establish systematic data bank of women's agency in every sector.
5. To eradicate all types of gender discrimination at local, national and international level through disseminating findings of research.
6. To coordinate and network with women headed organizations for joint action research and action plans.

Approaches

- Exploring and study, focusing on women's issues on existing socio-cultural practices on the basis of caste, class, region and religion.
- Analyzing existing social, culture, economical and political discriminatory practices and systems in a way that makes them feel empowered in their everyday life, eliminate gender gaps and create a just society.
- Collaborating and partnership approach for profound discussions among all stakeholders on action oriented results.
- Develop action plans from past learning, enforce implementation of policy and strategy plans, achievements.
